

LOYOLA INTERNATIONAL SCHOOL

IGNITED MINDS

Welcome to the edition where June is in Focus!

There are months that teach, and months that transform; June was both.

It asked us to pause and remember, to reflect and reset. It invited our students to celebrate, to question, to move, to speak, to listen. From Yoga mats to AI screens, from storytelling puppets to strategic chess moves; every space became a classroom, and every day a lesson.

We are proud to present this edition of Ignited Minds — a reflection of joy, growth, and grace. Thank you for turning the pages with us.

In Loving Memory of

Tyra Rodrigues, Grade 2

(5th Dec 2017 - 9th June 2025)

Life is a journey marked by presence, and remembered by love.
As a school, we came together to honour the life and memory of one we lost too soon.
In prayer, we found strength. In community, we found grace.
May peace surround those left behind, and light guide the soul ahead.

Moments That Bind Us

Some celebrations are joyous and yet – meaningful! This June, Loyola stood united in celebration of leadership, faith and family. Our students marked the birthday of Sheikh Tamim with heartfelt admiration for a leader who inspires national pride. Through the festive observance of Eid al-Adha, they reflected on the values of sacrifice, gratitude, and generosity. Father's Day brought a more personal note, as students created small tributes to the men who guide and support them. Expressions of love and appreciation flowed freely through creative tributes and assemblies. These moments deepened our sense of connection to our heritage, our families, and to each other

A Promise to Our Planet – World Environment Day

Instilling social responsibility and environmental awareness begins early at Loyola.

By engaging students in hands-on, values-driven experiences, we nurture a generation that not only understands sustainability; but lives it with purpose.

Students marked World Environment Day with vibrant placards, posters, and a message-driven campaign encouraging action for the planet.

They participated in quizzes, watched thought-provoking videos by environmentalists, and shared reflections on how small, everyday choices can shape a sustainable future.

Together, they stepped up as young voices for the Earth – ready to protect, preserve, and inspire.

Grounded in Wellness, Smart Choices & Healthy Habits

This section highlights the importance of mind-body balance, inner awareness, and informed choices around health and nutrition. At Loyola, well-being and self-care are essentials to nurturing a generation that is conscious, resilient, and ready for life.

On International Yoga Day, students took a collective breath stretching into stillness, focus, and self-awareness. They explored simple asanas and breathing techniques that nurture balance, flexibility, and calm. The session was a lesson in being present, listening inward, and finding peace in the pause.

Healthy habits begin with awareness and this month, our students got a hands-on lesson in mindful eating.

Through Crunch & Munch, they explored the value of wholesome foods and built a vocabulary around nutrition. In Sugar Detective, they studied ingredient lists and measured sugar content in everyday items, connecting facts with real-life decisions. Together, the activities promoted responsibility, moderation, and informed choices.

Voices and Visionaries

From digital futures and artistic mastery to real-world enterprise, Loyola students explored what it means to create with passion and purpose. This month, students met inspiration in its many forms — through technology, music, and real-world business.

Through the Coding Club's AI workshop, learners explored career pathways in technology, while demystifying digital tools that shape our world.

Meanwhile, in a soul-stirring session, renowned veena artist Ms. Veena Srivani mesmerized the Music Club with her story, passion, and performance.

Our young visionaries stepped into the entrepreneurial world at the Skill Development Center — where our young entrepreneurs brought their ideas to life — designing, marketing, and selling with remarkable clarity and confidence.

Showcasing Growth

This section is a spotlight on how students take ownership of their learning and are recognised for their creativity and achievement. Growth isn't just about knowledge. It's about how we express, perform, and connect it to the world around us.

For our youngest learners, the Quarterly Presentations became a joyful stage for self-expression. Dressed as fruits, community helpers, and more, KG students spoke and performed with confidence and charm — turning assessment into celebration.

The Reflections Prize Distribution honoured our young changemakers — students whose STEAM exhibits stood out for depth, creativity, and innovation. Each moment affirmed Loyola’s belief in expression-led, experience-based learning.

Partners in Progress

This section is about building trust, transparency, and shared responsibility between school and families — a crucial part of Loyola’s ethos.

In the Grade 10 & 12 Orientation, parents and students were guided through academic expectations, strategies, and the support system in place for board year success.

The Parent-Teacher Meeting across other grades offered time for meaningful dialogue sharing progress, addressing concerns, and planning next steps together.

Confident Communicators

Great teaching begins with clear thinking, confident speaking, and deep listening.

The Loyola International Toastmasters Club welcomed educators into a space of growth, expression, and shared reflection. Under the theme “Life is Beautiful,” teachers found their voice — and their community.

Bagless Day at Loyola was designed to close the term on a note of fun, freedom, and connection. With no school bags in sight, students from Grades 1 to 8 engaged in creative performances, games, skits, quizzes, and heartfelt affirmations.

The atmosphere was one of lightness — yet the learning was deep, joyful, and rooted in gratitude. It was a vibrant farewell to the academic term, and a beautiful reminder that joy and education can go hand in hand.

The Inter-Campus Chess Tournament was a mental marathon. It brought together sharp minds and steady hands from both Al Nasr and Oasis campuses. Beyond the wins and checkmates, it was a celebration of strategic thought and sportsmanship.
